concerned, and Shanks also is good hard on the bases. He is a hard worker, quick to move, and he could hit as well as he can do everything else in a ball game. There would be few players in his class.

For a while last season it looked as if Shanks had overcome his weaknesses and was both timely and hard, and what is more, his general playing improved as a result. He was not able to have the breaks very long. Soon old hard luck began to rob him of as much as he had gained, and he discouraged under such conditions and lets down in his stick work.

With the coming season will show him to be better advantage in this respect, in which case he will be the man of his being displaced by one of the recruits who are to be tried out.

To an extent, at least, there is still something experimental about Griffin's playing. Walter Johnson, of course, is a seasoned artist, but he is the only one in the team who is so. Soon all the others have much to learn, and, though there are reasons for this, the training that the rest have improved them greatly, they still have tain about them.

It is true that Bentley and Harper looked promising as the last season progressed. In fact, Bentley pitched a game which was brilliant. He started well, and then pulled up near the finish. Boehling was handicapped by a bad cold in the first half, and his work should not be judged. Gallia pitched brilliantly in the American League game, but he was the object of too much attention around the circuit last season, and if he gains control of his pitching, he will be a star. Joe Engel was good in spots, but still is weak on control. Sometimes pitchers are good with the ball, but are careless at a lot of promise one year and then fail the next.

It is hard to come through after a season's experience and prove winners. This is why we may not see any of the boys who did well last year with twirlers.

Billy Martin of the Boston Braves, who is wintering in this city, realizes that he has taken on too much. He is a good pitcher, but not a ball player, and he is going into active training.

With Fouls.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 6. The Loyola College football kept in the running for the southern championship by defeating the George Washington University team in their second meeting of the season tonight at the old Central gymnasium.

The contest was sensational and spectacular and kept the small crowd in a tense mood throughout the play.

The game was exceptionally clean and the fact that the referee's whistle interrupted the conflict thirty-three times for fouls. Nineteen personal fouls were committed, none of which was deliberate or serious. Joyce, the Loyola center, was the only player to get into a tangle with the opposition, but when he twisted his knee, and John Quinn took his place.

The songbook of the Blue and Gold squad was the feature.

purpose of reducing himself, Joe Bateman, who is a former member of the team, the training of athletes, will take Martin in charge.

That Cleveland team may upset catch the next season, as much as it did last year, when, after putting up a lame fight for the flag the 30-20-10 slump overtook the Birmingham crew has never been satisfactorily explained. The Fenwick-Palkeizer, a mighty good pitcher, away, but that alone would not have made the difference. Federal League influence no doubt played havoc.

Birmingham seems to have picked up several rather good-looking youngsters last fall. Smith, an outfielder, has the makings of a star in the making, while Barbara, a third baseman, handled himself well and looked like a star. Another infielder, seemed to be of the right sort. LaJoie's leaving will not hurt the team, as much as it will in Cleveland is concerned LaJoie was through last season. A fellow named Rogers, who was in the place in the line, to take the veteran's place, and he is counted to make good, so that Birmingham may have a team which again will prove a real surprise.
